Choose

“If you choose you can keep the commandments,” Sirach tells us. God “has set before you fire and water; to whichever you choose, stretch forth your hand” (Sirach 15:15, 16). This is a great mystery: God does not control us so completely that we cannot choose our own path. We have certain boundaries, of course, but no one but we can choose our way within those boundaries.

In today’s reading from Matthew’s Gospel, Jesus reminds us of our freedom and our responsibility for our lives. He calls us to look beyond the words of the commandments, all the way to their meaning. Look beyond the adultery to the selfishness that poisons our love. Look beyond the murder to the anger that eats away at our compassion. Look beyond the perjured testimony to the lies and deception that drive our behavior.

Our vocation is to choose life for ourselves, and to choose a path through our part of the world that helps make life possible and more abundant for others as well.

THE STRATEGIES OF SATAN, PART 1: THE "JEZEBEL" TACTIC FATHER ROBERT MCTEIGUE, SJ

First in a series on spiritual warfare: The satanic attack that exploits our fear, lust, wounds and lukewarmness. "But I have this against you, that you tolerate the woman Jezebel..." (Rev. 2:20) "Jezebel" is a name that is reviled throughout Scripture and Christian history. Parents would no more name their child "Jezebel" than they would name their child "Judas Iscariot." We see her as an idolater queen in Israel in 1 Kings and 2 Kings, and we see her name denounced as a false and seducing prophetess in the Book of Revelation. What does she represent? Beyond her historical identity in ancient Israel, Jezebel has come to be known as an "archetype," that is, as a model or standard, of wickedness — specifically: seduction, manipulation, idolatry and murder. She represents a hatred of authentic prophecy and religious authority. As such, "Jezebel" is a human name for a satanic strategy — a strategy that depends on our fear, lust, weakness and lukewarmness to succeed. Studying that strategy, noting where, how and why it works, is the first step towards overcoming that evil design.

Saint Ignatius Loyola, calling Satan "the enemy of our human nature," compares him to a general preparing to lay siege to a fortress. The general attacks on the weakest side. Likewise, Satan "...studies from all sides our theological, cardinal and moral virtues. Wherever he finds us weakest and most in need regarding our eternal salvation, there he attacks and tries to take us by storm."

Satan deploys the Jezebel strategy similarly, looking particularly for emotional wounds that can afford entry into our soul. The Jezebel strategy uses seduction and manipulation against the weak and doubting, techniques that are ineffective against the strong and obedient. In other words, when our pain is allowed to sour into self-pity, the Jezebel strategy is ready to go to work.

Alcoholics Anonymous knows this. Their quip against self-pity describes the process accurately: "Poor me! Poor me! Pour me another drink!" (Alternatively: "If you had a life like mine, you'd drink too!") The Jezebel strategy will dry your tears and kiss your bruises; the next step is to take you by the hand and lead you to where you should not go. What can we learn from all this? Everyone is wounded. We cannot afford to let our spiritual wounds become infected. We mustn't let our wounds fester into the fever of resentment and self-pity. If we're not vigilant, we leave an opening for the Jezebel strategy to gain entrance. If we don't resist the seductions and manipulations of Jezebel with boldness and holy obedience, then, Saint Ignatius Loyola warns, "...no wild beast on earth is more fierce than the enemy of our human nature as he pursues his evil intention with ever increasing malice."

The Jezebel strategy will dry your tears and kiss your bruises; the next step is to take you by the hand and lead you to where you should not go.

Holiness, humility and healing are intertwined. Our weaknesses and wounds can be stumbling blocks on our path to holiness. We must have the humility to admit our need before the Lord and ask for his healing. If we repent of our sin without asking our Lord for healing, we'll commit the same sins repeatedly. Repenting without getting healing for those wounds which are the roots of sin is like trimming the tops of weeds and then becoming surprised that the weeds grow back. Sin more easily takes root in places where our hearts have been wounded. If we want to be free of our habitual sins, we must find healing for our hearts. We can't receive healing if we don't ask for it. The first step for the healing of our hearts, essential as a remedy for sin, is to look at the crucified Lord and then to see and name our wounds so that we may offer them to him.

There is another step, one which is often overlooked. The wounds in our souls must be filled in with goodness, virtue and grace. Therefore, repentance, real conversion, true transformation in Christ, is a matter of holy desire. It's a matter of body, soul, commitment, will, mind, grace and blood. Any other account of conversion is a fantasy, an attempt to still play at being sinners, who can only play at being saved. The Jezebel strategy would rob us of our holy desires, and set our hearts upon the false promises of murderous idols.

This week, read through 1 Kings and 2 Kings. Take note of how the person of Jezebel is the embodiment of the satanic Jezebel strategy. Then meditate on the terrifying imagery of the Lord's punishment for the followers of Jezebel in Revelations 2. Jesus says that we must be as shrewd as serpents and as innocent as doves. (Matthew 10:16) Only then can we complete our task, which is both to resist the Jezebel strategy, and then to defeat it. I will be writing more about that in the coming weeks.

When I write next, I will speak of another satanic strategy that works hand-in-glove with the Jezebel strategy. Until then, let's keep each other in prayer.

10 MITOS SOBRE EL MATRIMONIO QUE LLEVAN A LA DECEPCIÓN, LA INSATISFACCIÓN Y LA RUPTURA DE LA PAREJA (Segunda Parte)

El amor de pareja es como una flor delicada que hay que cuidar... y evitar mitos dañinos, que desaniman. En 1988 el sociólogo estadounidense Jeffrey H. Larson publicó "The Marriage Quiz" ("La encuesta del matrimonio: las creencias de los estudiantes universitarios sobre algunos mitos del matrimonio"). En este libro, a partir de diversos estudios, mostraba que muchos matrimonios se rompían o eran más infelices de lo que cabría esperar porque los jóvenes se casaban con una serie de expectativas no realistas que, al no cumplirse, consideraban señales de desastre y causas para desistir del esfuerzo que significa convivir. Eran "razones para desertar". Razones malas, razones irracionales... pero que culturalmente consideraban que prácticamente les obligaban a romper su familia, o a desistir de intentar mejorarla.

Los años han ido reforzando las tesis de J.H. Larson y otros libros y estudios lo han constatado ampliándolo a otros ámbitos. Así, se ha publicado el ensayo Las creencias de la pareja sobre el matrimonio, volverse a casar y ser padres (Universidad de Tennessee), de Susan Alford Carter, El apoyo de los mitos sobre el matrimonio de los terapeutas familiares, de Benjamin E. Caldwell y Scott R. Woolley, o los trabajos de D. Popenoe. Todos ellos recogen y denuncian esas ideas derrotistas, "pro-divorcio" y "pro-ruptura", tan dañinas como extendidas. Aunque se trata de datos recogidos en Estados Unidos, en otros países con divorcio extendido no deben ser muy distintas.

6. "Mi marido no se adapta a mis costumbres: terminaremos rompiendo"

Cada pareja es un mundo, pero los estudios demuestran que es más frecuente que sean las mujeres las que cambien de costumbres para adaptarse a diversas circunstancias de sus maridos. De todas formas, como tantos otros temas, la pareja debe hablarlo y solucionarlo, no romper.

7. "Se enfada cuando le digo todo lo que pienso sobre sus hábitos, aficiones, cosas, aspecto... Vamos a romper"

Un mito que creen muchos es que "mi pareja ha de saber todo, todo, todo lo que pienso de ella". La realidad es que demasiada sinceridad no solicitada en vez de ser edificante puede ser desestabilizadora. Una pareja funciona mejor insistiendo en resaltar lo que nos gusta del otro, hacer muchos más comentarios positivos y limitar mucho los negativos.

8. "Se nos va el romanticismo, la pasión... tendremos que romper"

El romanticismo acaba desapareciendo tarde o temprano, pero ello no significa que la relación este destinada al fracaso. Cuando éste desaparece hay que luchar por mantener otros valores como el compromiso, el cariño, la complicidad, el compañerismo, la acción y proyectos conjuntos y otras mil cosas compartidas por dos que se aman.

9. "Tenemos que acostarnos juntos, o vivir juntos, antes de casarnos, para ver si somos compatibles"

No hay ningún estudio en ningún país, después de décadas de investigación, que demuestre esto, que relacione el sexo prematrimonial o el vivir juntos antes de casarse con mejores matrimonios. Por el contrario, hay infinidad de estudios en numerosos países, todos en la misma dirección: el sexo prematrimonial y la cohabitación o irse a vivir juntos sin casarse aumenta (y mucho) las posibilidades de divorcio.

10. "Si ella trabaja fuera de casa, toda esa familia se hundirá"

Chesterton comentaba que la mujer "emancipada" sustituía los mandatos de su marido (que le amaba y amaba el hogar común) por los del jefe (que no la ama a ella ni a su hogar). Pero estadísticamente no parece haber relación entre que la esposa trabaje fuera de casa y el éxito matrimonial. Esto es un tema que cada matrimonio debe gestionar según sus valores, deseos, posibilidades económicas, vocación, etc... Además, en el siglo XXI hay muchos grados de "trabajo en casa" (con internet, etc...) y de hecho el peligro es que ambos cónyuges estén "secuestrados" por su trabajo en su propio hogar.
