September 16- Fiesta of the Americas

Parish wide FIESTA OF THE AMERICAS. As our parish is growing and changing, so many things are needed to make it functional. So we decided to make a FIESTA!

We wanted to include our youth to be part of our change in the renovation process. There are nine candidates: Kailey Higgins, Elanie Ironsmith, Sharmaine Sison, Andrea Castro, Vanessa Cruz, Dora Garcia, Areli Perez, Karen Perez, and Litzi Reyes, running to be our Queen, Princess, and Duchess.

The candidates are not in a beauty pageant or anything of that sort. They are raising money making our parish a functional environment to grow in faith. This will help form a place to develop and practice our catholic faith for generations to come. Our candidates will look back on day and know they had a huge part of the new Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Saturday, September 16-We will initiate the festivities with the announcement of Queen, Princess and Duchess of the Americas. We will continue with a dance with DJ Savedra, in the gym, 7:00 pm- 12:00 am.

Sunday, September 17th- The fiesta continue with food, music, entertainment and much more starting at 10:00 am- ending at 5:00 pm. The announcement of the winners of the raffle tickets will be held at 4:00 pm.

Raffle tickets are 1-$5, 3-$10, 8- $20, 20- $40, or 60- $100.

Act of Kindness

I expect to pass through life but once. If therefore, there be any kindness I can show, or any good thing I can do to any fellow being, let me do it now, and not defer or neglect it, as I shall not pass this way again.
~William Penn

"Sunday Obligation" Unreasonably Harsh?

MATT NELSON

Some Catholics, especially parents of young children, find Sunday Mass attendance difficult.

As a parent of a spirited three-year-old and a busy one-year-old who loves to show off her prodigious screaming ability, I get it.

But despite our parental hardships, we recognize that we have a moral duty to be there. The Catholic Church reflects this obligation in its Code of Canon Law: "On Sundays and other holy days of obligation, the faithful are bound to participate in the Mass" (can. 1247). The Sunday liturgy is mandatory, like showing up for work; and, just as skipping work can have serious consequences, so can skipping church. In fact, it is a mortal sin to miss Sunday Mass without good reason. For a Catholic then, whether or not to attend on Sunday is no small decision.

But is the "Sunday obligation" too strict of an expectation upon Catholics?

Rules to live by

Moral laws are like signposts: they properly orient us, and once we have been properly oriented we cease to notice them. The first time I traveled to Calgary I needed to follow the signs; they told me where to go and thus imposed a direction upon me. That was a long time ago. Years later, I know how to get there without the aid of signs. I have been properly oriented. The signs are still there — they still hold their objective force — but I no longer notice them. They are unimposing.

Likewise, the Sunday obligation helps to orient us spiritually. It can be easy to forget that Sunday marks the beginning of our week, not the end. In a sense, the Sunday Mass prepares us for the days ahead and sets the spiritual tone for the week, filling us with God's word and grace so we might glorify the Lord with our lives. By starting our week with the Sunday liturgy, we publicly profess with our whole being that we are sons and daughters of God and members of his Church. We are God's first. Without him we are nothing.

That is why Jesus can say, "He who loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he who loves son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me" (Matt. 10:37). Furthermore, the first and greatest commandment is, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind" (Matt. 22:38). Our unique love for God (and his for us!) is specially consummated when we receive the Eucharist at Mass.

The Mass is challenging

A Catholic is permitted to be absent from Sunday Mass in light of serious circumstances such as illness. But it is not licit to skip for trivial reasons. We might be tempted to do this, nonetheless, because Mass is not always an engaging way to spend Sunday morning. Many of us lead dynamic lives. We are used to the continual stimulation of caffeine and conversation. We are not used to the slowness or the silence of the liturgy. We are not used to the language of the Bible readings and the prayers. Even for a devout Catholic, it can be difficult to slow down and settle into a day of rest — and especially into a solemn hour of prayer and worship.

The essential moral prescription of the third commandment nonetheless remained: man ought to set apart a full day each week for rest and worship.

We can't grasp the intrinsic value of the Mass until we understand that its aim is not to stimulate like a form of entertainment: its aim is to sanctify. Although the Eucharist is the "source and summit of the Christian life" according to the Catechism, it is not uncommon for a Catholic — through no fault of his own — to feel almost nothing when he receives it (1324). Since the grace received in the Eucharist is not a physical or emotional sensation but a spiritual reality, it tends to leave the senses unmoved. For this reason, a Catholic's experience of Sunday Mass can be deceptively dry and may leave him feeling like nothing special has gone on at all. This does not necessarily reflect a defect in the liturgy or the believer. Rather, it moves the Catholic to a deeper mental conviction of things not seen: "Blessed are those who have not seen and yet believe" (John 20:29).

The Mass presents an essential challenge to Catholics: in its slow and leisurely rhythm, in its moments of deep silence, in its demands of faith. Two grave dangers to the human soul are a lack of contemplation and lack of love. A human being cannot have enduring happiness without these two things. The Mass fosters both.

Acerca de tener enemigos para amar

R.J. SNELL

Nuestro Señor, sin ser el sentimentalista que de manera errónea se cree que es, da por sentado que tendremos enemigos. Entre las enseñanzas difíciles del Sermón de la Montaña se encuentra el mandamiento de amar a los enemigos: «Ustedes han oído que se dijo: Amarás a tu prójimo y odiarás a tu enemigo. Pero yo les digo: Amen a sus enemigos, rueguen por sus perseguidores; así serán hijos del Padre que está en el cielo». (Mateo 5, 43-44) Lo anterior presupone que tenemos enemigos. Nuestro Señor, sin ser el sentimentalista que de manera errónea se cree que es, da por sentado que tendremos enemigos en tanto nos promete beatitud cuando «sean insultados y perseguidos, y se los calumnie en toda forma a causa de mí».

Buscamos la paz, la ofrecemos y, no obstante, tendremos enemigos en la medida en que mantengamos la fe con Cristo. La fidelidad implica nuestra presencia como un signo de contradicción, hasta de escándalo. Sin embargo, parece dolorosamente obvio que muchos católicos incluso, por desgracia, algunos en la jerarquía, buscan «paz, paz... cuando no hay paz». (Jeremías 6, 14) Mucho antes de ingresar a la Iglesia, la visión católica de la integridad del mundo me resultaba una doctrina hermosa y atractiva. Mi formación previa me había enseñado un tipo de reticencia suspicaz con respecto del «mundo», una clase de buena fe que rechazaba o solo aceptaba a regañadientes el campo de la ciencia, el arte, la literatura, la música, el deporte, la bebida, y la danza.

Los católicos en verdad parecían estar tan en casa en el mundo, aun mientras anhelaban el cielo. La Iglesia insistía en que la encarnación realmente sucedió y que había un valiente compromiso con las velas y el altar, el pan y el vino, el agua y el aceite, las vestiduras y el arte. En contra de esto, mi comprensión anterior parecía etérea, «espiritual», gnóstica, y la fresca sencillez del catolicismo me deslumbraba. De modo similar, la Iglesia no tenía miedo a las humanidades y las ciencias, ya que sabía, en las palabras de Gaudium et Spes, «que las cosas creadas y la sociedad misma gozan de propias leyes y valores... todas las cosas están dotadas de consistencia, verdad y bondad propias y de un propio orden regulado...». Fundamentalmente, aprendí de la Iglesia que la gracia de la encarnación no destruyó la naturaleza humana sino que la perfeccionó, la completó, la elevó. A pesar de esto, la Iglesia con toda la razón insistía en que la autonomía de la naturaleza tenía sentido pero solo a la luz de la creación y la redención. Cualquier intento de ver a la independencia del mundo como si no dependiera de Dios era falso. Como Gaudium et Spes proseguía, «...por el olvido de Dios la propia criatura queda oscurecida».

Nuestro «sentirnos como en casa» en la tierra ya no es católico sino burgués, no proviene de nuestro compromiso con la encarnación del Dios perfecto como el hombre que restablece todo en Él mismo. Es cada vez más una capitulación, una debilidad, una aletargada satisfacción con nosotros y la forma en que el mundo funciona. Olvídense de condenarlo y maldecirlo, ni siquiera estaremos en desacuerdo con él. Cuando se trata de música, arte, arquitectura, oración, fiestas y ayunos, apenas nos reconocemos en nuestra difusa conformidad. Aun peor, mucho peor, somos amigotes del mundo en lo que respecta a la vida, la muerte, el pecado, y la salvación. Tendemos a no manifestar nuestra historia sino a dialogar. Por supuesto, no estoy añorando algún tipo de inocente triunfalismo, pero realmente pensamos que nuestra versión del significado del mundo es verdadera, ¿o no? Sí creemos, también, que el destino eterno de nuestras almas y las de muchos otros depende de que esa historia sea cierta, ¿no? ¿O no lo hacemos?

Sin embargo, casi nunca hablamos de él, ni mucho menos lo proclamamos con valentía, y a cambio elegimos el difuso, débil y decepcionante confort de los valores genéricos y contemporáneos de occidente. Por lo tanto, tenemos menos enemigos y esto hace que cumplir el mandamiento «ama a tus enemigos» sea más difícil de lo que debería.
